

Field Dressing © Canadian War Museum

Field Dressing

Military service was often dangerous. People could be wounded by enemy weapons or in accidents. First aid was an essential part of military training. Field dressings were large bandages used in treating wounds. This one is a reproduction of an army field dressing. The navy and air force used similar versions.

Reproduction