BEFORE THE PROGRAM

The following activities are suggestions only. There are no pre-requisite activities for your program.

About the First World War

Students do not require prior knowledge of the First World War to participate in this virtual school program. The program focuses on modelling historical thinking activities and all necessary information will be covered during the session. However, if you would like to introduce the subject, we suggest the Museum's First World War module as a good place to start.

About the Museum

If you would like to familiarize yourself or your students with the Canadian War Museum, we suggest this short video. It features spectacular views of the building alongside images of some of the Museum's most treasured artifacts. To learn more about the history of the War Museum, including an overview of its galleries, please visit the About section of our website.

AFTER THE PROGRAM

Follow up your virtual experience by exploring one of the many online resources that the Canadian War Museum has to offer. You'll find digitized content, historical overviews and classroom-ready activities.

ONLINE RESOURCES

Over the Top

This web module enables intermediate students to experience life in the trenches during the First World War. Part history and part adventure story, Over the Top allows players to determine the outcome of the story by making decisions at key moments. This educational resource includes follow-up activities, maps, films and document references.

Remembrance Day

Planning a Remembrance ceremony? Looking for accessible primary source materials? Developed for educators, this new digital resource includes artifacts, art and documents from the Museum's collections, as well as historical overviews and learning activities. This online module has content and suggestions for Remembrance ceremonies that are ready to use, or can be customized for your class, school or virtual event.

Supply Line: Travelling Discovery Boxes

Explore teacher resources developed for the First and Second World War Discovery Boxes. Use the background materials, including personal stories and archival documents, and the lesson plans on their own or in conjunction with the travelling education kit.
